

Health & Safety Management

Practical assurance for your workplace

A sustainable workplace health and safety culture needs active support from senior management, it also needs clear systems. Both elements are necessary to keep people safe and help you make decisions on health and safety issues. The management of health and safety in an organisation should include:

Leadership and engagement

- Understanding of your risk profile.
- Vision and Goals.
- What resources you have and your worker competencies.
- Leadership and Commitment.
- What communication systems exist and how issues are resolved.
- Systems for worker participation.
- Measuring your performance.
- Continuous improvement, review and monitoring.

Risk Management and Awareness, including how you;

- Identify hazards and risks.
- Assess risks.
- Develop, implement and review controls.
- Plan for emergencies.

At First 4 Safety, we can discuss the development of your health and safety systems. We can also conduct an independent review of your current systems, assist you with any gaps, or help you integrate your health and safety system into your wider business management systems. Developing a health and safety culture protects workers and makes real business sense too. Reducing the number of accidents and injuries is a proven way to achieve more motivated and productive workers, cut absenteeism rates and reduce incidents that disrupt your business. Here at First 4 Safety we can help you achieve a safer workplace through a range of consultancy services and products.
